History

100 Women on the Move, Inc. began as a group of five (5) young ladies planning a fashion show fundraiser for the A.J. McClung YMCA. As the plans for the fashion show progressed, the young ladies were required to advertise – which required a name. Much thought had been given to what the name should be. It was understood that the name had to hold significance and would represent the ladies who established it; thus, 100 Women on the Move, Inc. This name would signify the force of 100 Women impacting this community.

The organization chose as its mission to “implement programs for the benefit of youth organizations; to provide educational and social activities; to promote women, children and the family as a unit; and to implement and provide charitable activities for the betterment of children of this community.”

In 1993, the organization was organized with Joyce Brown being appointed President. Under her directorship the organization was devoted to provide intellectual, educational, and social activities for children in this community.

100 Women on the Move has consistently provided service to the following organizations:

Susan G. Cooper

Real Estate State Broker

Susan G. Cooper is a business owner, philanthropist, voting rights activist, community leader, fair housing, and homeowner advocate. Susan has more than 30 years of experience in banking, financial planning, business and investment banking, mortgage lending and the real estate industry. Susan served the Urban League of Greater Columbus as a board member in 2004 and served as the Board Chair from 2005 to 2007. In 2008 at the brink of the economic recession, mortgage meltdown, and global financial crisis she combined her banking, mortgage lending and real estate sales experience, opened Centennial Realty & Mortgage Company. The Urban League board of directors called her back in 2012 to rebuild and reopen the doors, regain the HUD Housing Certification, and lead it through change, adversity, and an economic recession — all while running and operating two businesses. She lent her name and time to the Urban League to lead the charge to rebirth, save and sustain the organization. She rebuilt relationships, enhanced programming, and regained funding. Along with young professional Shay Peterson she reestablished the Young Professionals to ensure the lifeblood and vitality of the organization. Susan also reestablished a standalone city-wide summer youth jobs and career path training program, hiring hundreds of youths, and placing them in jobs throughout the city to help break the cycle to property, prevent crime and ensuring that youth earn their way through life. Her work of standing in the gap without taking a salary from the organization and her vision ensured the Urban League would remain in the Columbus community for generations to come. During the 2020 presidential elections, the 2020 and 2022 senate runoff for Georgia's two U.S. Senate seats, she spearheaded and led the Get Out the Vote and Voter Mobilization initiatives for the Columbus community. She received the John R. Lewis Good Trouble Social Action Award and NAACP C.A. Brother Love Exemplary Service Community Advocate Award. After transitioning out of the Urban League In 2021 Susan established a 501c3 public charitable foundation, the SGC Community Impact and Empowerment Foundation, to continue helping our community help those who need it the most.
